Re: Infringement of Principal Lighting Group IP

Dear Mr. Norton:

My law firm and I represent Principal Lighting Group, LLC (“Principal”), an innovation leader in LED-based sign lighting solutions.

We write to provide formal notice that RetroLED has infringed and continues to infringe at least Principal’s U.S. Patent No. 9,311,835 (attached herewith).

Namely, for example, RetroLED’s marketing and sales of its “Rigid” end caps at minimum renders RetroLED liable for contributory infringement under 35 U.S.C. § 271(c) of at least claim 1 of the ’835 Patent. We have strong reason to believe that RetroLED’s “Rigid” end caps – e.g., part no. EC-T-12 HO and TOREC – are used in assemblies that infringe the ’835 Patent and that there is no substantial non-infringing use of these end caps.

Because RetroLED does not have permission or license from Principal to market or sell components for products covered by the ’835 Patent, RetroLED is liable for infringing the ’835 Patent under 35 U.S.C. § 271. Moreover, to the extent RetroLED was previously unaware of the ’835 Patent for purposes of contributory infringement or otherwise, this letter constitutes such notice and can also be used to support a finding of willful infringement, which could lead to Principal being awarded enhanced damages should it prevail in litigation.

Thus, Principal demands that RetroLED immediately stop offering to sell (marketing) and selling any components used by RetroLED or its customers to infringe Principal’s intellectual property.

I look forward to receiving your response no later than February 28, 2018.

Sincerely,
